IMPRESS.

The "Man from Egypt" excuse is not regarded seriously by the prosecuting authorities. It will be contended that Waite, in preparation for his crimes and in his efforts to cover them up showed mental activity unlikely in a diseased brain.

For instance, according to his confession. Waite killed his mother-in law without exciting any suspicion and successfully accomplished his purpose of having her body cremated. To expected to have the body of his ather-in-law cremated and failed only because of the arrival in Grand Rapids of the mysterious "K. Mr. Peck died early in the morning of March 12. Watte, with the assistance of Undertaker Potter, succeeded in starting the body to Grand Rapids on the Wolverine Express at 5 o'clock that afternoon. He had made plans to take Mr. Peck's body to Detroit for cremation immediately after the funeral services in Grand Rapids.

The prosecution is prepared to show that Waite displayed anything but mental weakness in persuading his wife to make a will in his favor; also that he showed quick decision, when, sensing in Grand Rapids, that March 18.

He left the train at the One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street station and immediately telephoned to the Hotel Plaza to Mrs. Margaret Horton, who shared an apartment with him there, to pack up and get out. Then in order to satisfy himself if he was being followed by detectives he did some extraordinary turning and twisting in making his way to his apart-
